Dear Friends in Christ,

If you were to look around my living room and kitchen, you would see all kinds of pictures up on the walls, on end tables, counters, and my entertainment center. Some are of my family, of course, but the majority are pictures of my friends. Friends from college, high school, seminary, and bible camp; friends I've had for more than twenty years in some cases. While I don't get to talk to many of them all that often, those pictures are a reminder to me of the great support systems I've had over the years and of all the ups and downs I've shared with some of the people I love the most. Those pictures make me happy, though I'll admit they make me a little sad when I start to miss the people in them.

So, why am I rambling about the pictures of my friends that I have around my apartment? Well, I was reminded today that August 5th is National Friendship Day here in America, so I wanted to take the opportunity to write briefly about these relationships that many of us hold so dear to us. But, first, a little background. National Friendship Day was founded by Hallmark 99 years ago. It was to be a day for people to honor their friends by sending them cards. Eventually, it fell to the wayside until just seven years ago when the United Nations recognized July 30th as International Friendship Day. Other countries took it from there, and we landed on August 5th!

So, is National Friendship Day just another "greeting card" holiday? I don't think it is at all. In my experience, some of the best friendships have caused people to blossom and become more fully the people they believe God has created them to be. They have even saved lives. A reminder that a person has just one friend who loves can help draw a person out of some of the deepest depths of despair. Friendships are crucial to our well-being.

Being a friend to another person is also a way to share God's love with them. When you take the time to get to know another person and value them for being the beloved child of God that they are, you are sharing God's love. When you go to a movie with a friend, comfort them in times of grief, laugh with them until you're both in tears... you are sharing God's love and joy. You are reminding them that they have value, a place within the body of Christ.

As this summer winds down, I invite you to reach out to friends—even potential friends or a person or two that struggle to make social connections. Befriend them, get to know them, love them with the love of God. And watch them (and yourself!) blossom and grow into the fullness of who you are in Jesus Christ.

Peace,

Pastor Lisa
